

Solvisoft Business Intelligence

Information as the Engine for Your Operation

Many organisations store large amounts of data in their ERP, CRM or other costly systems. Solvisoft's Business Intelligence application makes this information stream accessible in a more practical way and offers powerful and useful analysis capabilities. The treasure trove of data available in your backbone systems then becomes a powerful engine for your operation.

SOLVISOFT

Information as the Engine for Your Operation

Bird's-Eye View

Your backbone-system, such as Exact Globe for example, most likely contains valuable information on supplies, orders, transactions and sales among other topics. Most systems therefore include functionality to analyse and report that information. That functionality, however, is often very limited, as well as being labour-intensive and costly. Solvisoft Business Intelligence offers unprecedented capabilities to unlock available data quickly and effectively and to translate that data immediately into valuable management information. This gives you a clear, bird's-eye view of the organisation so that you can improve the internal processes effectively.

Data Warehouse

All information available immediately

The heart of the Business Intelligence software from Solvisoft is an advanced data warehouse. Each day, this data warehouse automatically retrieves the necessary information from your business systems. As a result, you require no costly licences to analyse data from the systems. Even if you use various types of back-end software, Solvisoft Business Intelligence integrates the information effortlessly in the data warehouse. In this way, all the information from throughout the entire organisation and any subsidiaries is bundled centrally, classified and analysed. What is more, Solvisoft's self-developed software does all of this in a fraction of the time of existing systems.

Analysis

The right information for strategic conclusions

Solvisoft Business Intelligence includes a wide array of options to present the required information. You can start working immediately with the 150 most common analysis methods. However, if you would like to analyse the data in another manner, you can prepare custom reports yourself. This means that you always have precisely the right information you need to make strategic conclusions. The options you have to analyse and structure information are practically unlimited. In this way, as easily as you make a cross-section of the entire organisation, you can zoom in on the smallest detail.

Reporting

Know-how is easy to utilize

Solvisoft Business Intelligence makes all the processes in your organisation completely transparent. You not only know the results of the entire organisation, but you are also meticulously aware of the performance of various departments, employees and suppliers. That enables you to optimise work processes and, for example, supply management in a focused manner. The system not only quickly locates all relevant information, but also ensures that the information is immediately implementable. The system is web-based; every authorised user can therefore log in any time and anywhere. In addition, you can have an overview of the most significant information sent automatically each day, for example, to managers or customers. Reports of the data you desire are easy to exporter, for example, to an Excel document.
